A TERRIBLE DEATH.

The Louisville Commercial gives the following particulars of the death of Mr. A. R. Walsh:
"Anthony R. Walsh jumped from the fifth story window of the Galt House, about eleven o'clock Sunday morning, while suffering from temporary aberration of mind, and, striking the pavement nearly 100 feet below, was instantly killed. Mr. Walsh came to Louisville five years ago, from Milan, Tenn., and upon the opening of the Galt House, took charge of its telegraph and railroad office, which position he retained for three years. He was then appointed ticket agent of the Short Line Railroad, and placed in charge of the office at the corner of Fourth and Jefferson streets, where he remained until March 1, 1874. About this time he severed his connection with the Short Line Company, and at the time of his death was negotiating for a situation on another road. Mr. Walsh was an extremely popular man, and associated with people fond of pleasure, and in company with these sometimes indulged in liquor, but seldom to excess. A few days ago he was taken suddenly ill, and since then remained in his hotel, hoping soon to recover. He was rapidly improving, and Sunday morning his friends concluded he would soon be well. Mr. Wm. DeBree, telegraph operator at the Louisville Hotel, and a very intimate friend of Mr. Walsh, was in the room during Sunday morning. Walsh, who had been reading a magazine, remarked to DeBree that 'his head was getting clear, and he believed he would step across the hall.' DeBree allowed him to go out of the room, but soon hearing the noise of a window being raised, followed, and beheld Walsh's legs dangling from a window separated from him by a partition. He reached out and grasped the tassel of Walsh's coat with one hand and supported himself with the other just as Walsh threw himself out of the window. He held to the coat with all his strength, and called for assistance.
DeBree could feel the coat gradually sliding through his hand, and told the unfortunate man to seize his arm. Walsh responded, 'Let me go, Bill; it's no use.' DeBree then again exerted himself to retain his hold, but suddenly felt the coat slip from his grasp, and he himself thrown on his back. With a shudder of horror he continued crying for help, and at last got up and went down stairs. Colonel Johnson, manager of the hotel, Mr. Murphy, the clerk, and Dr. Atkinson at once went to the basement story of the hotel, and found the body in the area on the eastern side of the building. The back part of the head was mashed in a terrible manner. The body was conveyed to a room in the hotel, and the Coroner being sent for, held an inquest. The verdict rendered by the jury was in accordance with the foregoing statements. Many of his friends, including the members of Louisville Commandery Knights Templar, visited the remains during the day, and several stayed by his coffin at night. A little child from whom Walsh was in the habit of purchasing button-hole bouquets, upon being informed of his death, twined together a pretty bunch of white flowers and placed them on his coffin with a note containing the words: 'From the little flower girl.'
Mr. Walsh was a native of Ireland, but lived during the greater part of his life in Nova Scotia, from which place he went to Chicago, then to Cincinnati and Milan, Tennessee, and finally came to Louisville, where he gathered around him a host of staunch friends. His brother, who was agent for the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad at Chicago, was notified of his death, and telegraphed to have his body sent to Chicago. Accordingly it was accompanied to the Fourteenth street depot, at 3 p. m. Monday, by Louisville Commandery, K. T., and Falls City L. d. g. F. and A. M., of which he was a member in good standing.

BREACH OF PROMISE CASE.—An interesting breach of promise case, involving some nice questions of law, is now on trial before the United States Circuit Court at New Haven, Conn. Mrs. Elizabeth A. Ayer seeks to obtain $40,000 damages for promise of marriage. For an alleged breach of promise of marriage, the plaintiff is a widow of forty, who was formerly engaged in the millinery business in New York. The defendant is an ex-captain, formerly of New York, and now of Chesler, and is reputed to be worth over $100,000. Mrs. Ayer does not consider the sentimental aspects of her case, but views it from a business point of view only. Her grievance is not that the captain wounded her feelings by refusing to marry her after he had promised to do so, but that he caused an actual loss to her in dollars and cents by his proposal to marry her. She was driving a prosperous business in the fashionable millinery trade when she first met the captain, her profits being $40,000 a year, and upon his promising to marry her she sold out her establishment at his children. She reminded him that his children might object to having her for their mother, but the captain assured her that his children loved him and that they would raise no objection. 'I know you do not love me, Mrs. Ayer, as I do you,' said the gallant captain; 'but when we are married I know you will, I will be so good to you.' After this declaration she accepted him, but the marriage had been again and again postponed, and finally the captain refused to marry her at all, alleging that she was in poor health. To this allegation the widow replies that on one occasion, before the engagement, she told him that it would be very discouraging to him to have her sick, to which he replied: 'What would my love be worth if I could not love in sickness as well as in health.'

CIRCULAR PRICES BINDING.—The United States District Court of St. Louis had before it recently a case involving the binding character of trade circulars containing offers to furnish goods at certain prices without limitation as to time. In February, 1873, Hall, Kimbark & Co., of Chicago, sent circulars throughout the country by mail offering to furnish patent cutlery for $2 per pair. Mr. George D. Hall, of St. Louis, ordered 3,000 pairs of the springs by telegraph immediately after the receipt of the circular, but the Chicago firm refused to fill the order, as the wholesale price had in the meantime advanced about twenty cents per pair. Mr. Hall brought suit for damages and was awarded $1,350, being the difference between the price of the springs at the date of the circular, and the price when the Chicago firm refused to accept the order, the court holding that merchants are bound to fill orders received within a reasonable time in reply to circulars offering goods at a fixed price, and without limitation as to time. This seems like a just decision.
